It becomes a lifestyle for millions and permeates their personal and professional lives. Procrastinators delay or put off things until later, usually things they find unpleasant, overwhelming, or anxiety-producing. When they begin to experience these noxious feelings, they avoid these emotions as quickly as possible. They run away from these feelings and do something that makes them feel better for the moment. This creates a vicious cycle of putting off things to feel better even though we know we still have to complete the task. Procrastination is a very tough habit to deal with and has damaged millions of careers, impacted people's health ( e.g. delay going to the doctor's or getting a colonoscopy), and cost people billions of dollars (e.g. late income taxes; credit card penalties, missed scholarship and grant deadlines). This Procrastination" Quiz" will help you identify how and why you procrastinate along with over 20 effective strategies to help you "manage" this tough habit. The CCH Federal Tax Course approaches the study of taxation from the perspective of the student who will become a business person faced with business decisions that are inevitably affected by tax considerations. This perspective leads to a very different coverage in this textbook -- coverage that is useful for accounting, finance and general business majors. The new edition focuses on the central concepts that build our tax framework and avoids small exceptions and details to ensure that the student can confidently master the critical underpinnings of federal taxation. It abandons minutia that not only affects a very small number of taxpayers, but also tends to change often. In this way, there are no wasted motions and students gain a stronger, more solid understanding of federal tax principles.
