Once looked upon as being in need of restoration, cars with original paint, rust and patina, especially within the global Volkswagen community, have gradually become far more popular than restored cars. When walking down a line of cars at a car show, it's easy to see why; these cars are rare, unspoiled survivors - cars that tell a story of an interesting and varied past. The look of the Volkswagens being built in this style is so honest, unspoiled and characterful, that it has begun to inspire the media; even Hollywood movie stars and celebrities. Whilst this has undoubtedly resulted in increased car values, and turned a brand of cars that had always been a cheap, honest mode of transportation into something cool with a high price tag, the generation it initially inspired has grown with the hobby, and produced a micro-industry that still manages to embrace the 'Built not bought' ethos. This book, superbly illustrated with stunning colour photographs, takes an inside look at some of the key car builders, dealers, celebrities and hobbyists, as well as the different styles of build, meaning every single car has a style all its own. The Ford FE (Ford Edsel) engine is one of the most popular engines Ford ever produced, and it powered most Ford and Mercury cars and trucks from the late 1950s to the mid-1970s. For many of the later years, FE engines were used primarily in truck applications. However, the FE engine is experiencing a renaissance; it is now popular in high-performance street, strip, muscle cars, and even high-performance trucks. While high-performance build-up principles and techniques are discussed for all engines, author Barry Rabotnick focuses on the max-performance build-up for the most popular engines: the 390 and 428. With the high-performance revival for FE engines, a variety of builds are being performed from stock blocks with mild head and cam work to complete aftermarket engines with aluminum blocks, high-flow heads, and aggressive roller cams. How to Build Max-Performance Ford FE Engines shows you how to select the ideal pistons, connecting rods, and crankshafts to achieve horsepower requirements for all applications. The chapter on blocks discusses the strengths and weaknesses of each particular block considered. The book also examines head, valvetrain, and cam options that are best suited for individual performance goals. Also covered are the best-flowing heads, rocker-arm options, lifters, and pushrods. In addition, this volume covers port sizing, cam lift, and the best rocker-arm geometry. The FE engines are an excellent platform for stroking, and this book provides an insightful, easy-to-follow approach for selecting the right crank, connecting rods, pistons, and making the necessary block modifications. My lifelong passion for cars and motorsport led to the creation of the website automotivetorque.com in 2017. The website was established in Melbourne, Australia with the main focus being on old and new performance cars and motorsport events. The original intention of the site was to give visitors free access to an extensive catalogue of photos taken at motorsport events including the Australian Grand Prix, historic events at Sandown and Phillip Island and Targa events. As the website's grown, I've included used car reviews and have been fortunate enough to get cars from CarAdvice to review. More recently, I've managed to undertake some new car reviews from Kia, Toyota and Hyundai. The aim is to get more new cars to review in the future and hopefully provide accurate and non-biased advice to new car buyers. I'm also adding in some content from new car releases and have been uploading some in car-footage of my drives. Hopefully this area of the website can really grow in the future. This e-book focuses on new and used car reviews, significant road and race cars, Australian motor racing circuits, the Aussie Driver Search competition, great driving roads in Victoria and cars that feature in computer games. I've included my favourite images into these articles. I hope that you enjoy the diverse range of content and find it interesting and informative.
